

BACHELOR OF ARTS WITH A MAJOR IN CLASSICAL AND ANCIENT NEAR EASTERN STUDIES

At GW, our Classical Studies program provides a greater understanding of the modern world by concentrating on the sources and values of Western civilization. You will encounter the ideas of ancient thinkers, study ancient history on the Acropolis in Athens, learn about the rise and fall of the Roman Empire, and follow the adventures of the gods in mythology. You will be immersed in a variety of fields including Greek and Latin languages, ancient history, classical drama and mythology, and the influence of classical civilization on the modern world. Our faculty members stress an interdisciplinary approach and coursework is enhanced by free lectures sponsored by the Archaeological Institute of America and the Society for the Preservation of the Greek Heritage. Gaining important analytical skills, such as critical thinking, persuasive writing, and visual literacy—GW graduates go on to careers in teaching, archaeology, museum work, publishing, and library science.
