

MASTER OF ARTS IN THE FIELD OF MUSEUM STUDIES

The Museum Studies program in the Corcoran School of the Arts and Design welcomes students interested in developing a critical engagement with the museum field and gaining hands-on training in the broad range of skills required for museum work. Students gain foundational knowledge about the state of museum work today, practical skills and the ability to critically engage with developments in the field. Coursework offers both breadth and depth in collections management, museum management, exhibitions and visitor experience, and public engagement. A range of specialized courses in topics including ethics and values, social justice, preventive conservation, digitization, project management, and museum governance allow students the flexibility to design programs of study geared to their interests and designed with their professional goals in mind.

Students whose career interests are primarily in museum education should refer to the master of arts in teaching in the field of museum education (<http://bulletin.gwu.edu/education-human-development/educational-leadership/ma-teaching-museum-studies/>) program in the Graduate School of Education and Human Development.
