

MASTER OF ARTS IN THE FIELD OF ISLAMIC STUDIES

The Master of Arts in Islamic Studies, offered by the Department of Religion, focus on the study of Islam in its classical and contemporary formations, with an emphasis on developing competence in classical Islamic intellectual traditions. The cross-disciplinary program allows students to study with a variety of faculty members who are knowledgeable about the classical formulations of Islam, and have on-the-ground experience in Muslim-majority countries and communities. Centrally located in Washington, D.C., the program offers students the opportunity to interact with U.S. government agencies, think tanks, non-governmental institutions, and the large Muslim community residing and working in the metro area. The program also offers “non-traditional students” such as working professionals, civil servants, and employees of international agencies the opportunity to tailor the program to their particular needs.

A concentration in Shi'ism is available in the MA program. Please see the website for the Department of Religion for more information on the requirements for the concentration. The division between Sunnis and Shi'ites lies at the root of much of the strife in the Islamic world today. Our program uniquely features not only an education in Sunni Islam, but Shi'ite Islam as well. A comprehensive study must include both major branches of Islamic tradition for a full understanding of current issues in the world of Islam, and what its future holds.

Qualified applicants who intend to pursue the concentration in Shi'ism may be eligible for community supported fellowships. These fellowships are not sponsored, awarded, or managed by the university.

Visit the program website (<https://religion.columbian.gwu.edu/ma-islamic-studies/>) for additional information.
