

MINOR IN CRIMINAL JUSTICE

The minor in criminal justice offers students a window into the historical development of criminal justice and its evolution into modern legal systems. Course material includes fundamental principles of sociological theory and criminal law, and students closely examine the social, legal and cultural conditions affecting the nature of crime. The curriculum requires two electives, one of which may be from a department outside of sociology, allowing students to incorporate fields such as anthropology, political science, history and public policy.

Sociology majors may not pursue a Minor in Criminal Justice.
