

EDUCATION SPECIALIST IN THE FIELD OF EDUCATIONAL LEADERSHIP AND ADMINISTRATION

George Washington University's education specialist program (EdS) in educational leadership and administration has garnered national recognition and is designated as a program of distinction by the National Policy Board for Educational Administration (NPBEA). The program is nationally accredited by the Council for the Accreditation of Educator Preparation (CAEP). In addition, it is aligned with and embeds the National Educational Leadership Preparation (NELP) standards in all of its licensure courses and internship experiences.

The program is designed to develop intellectual leaders with a master's in education degree who wish to further their professional skills in facilitating positive change, creating and sustaining a culture of shared leadership and collaboration, ensuring equitable outcomes, and promoting the success and well-being of all school members. The program serves working PreK-12 professional educators in diverse school communities who are interested in PreK-12 school-based or central office leadership positions, central office supervisory positions; increased responsibility in PreK-12 teaching; and/or advanced levels of PreK-12 professional responsibility in public and private schools or similar organizations.

The degree satisfies the credit, coursework, and field experiences required for licensure eligibility as an administrator or principal in the District of Columbia, and the partner states of the interstate compact agreement. Licensure is not automatically granted upon graduation: Candidates must submit a formal application to each state in which they seek a license. It is recommended that GSEHD graduates apply for DC licensure first to ease the process of reciprocity. Following receipt of DC licensure, candidates are eligible for reciprocal certification in more than 40 participating states. For further information about licensure see the Teacher and Administrator Certification website (<https://gsehd.gwu.edu/certification-licensing/>).
