The Design program in the Corcoran School of the Arts and Design explores the intersection of design, innovation, public communications, and the social impacts of technologies. This work takes place in the nation’s capital at a critical moment in the history of cultural discourse and design practice. Course offerings address topics across print media, product design, spatial design, motion graphics, brand identity, UI/UX, exhibition design, and design ethics. At both the undergraduate and graduate levels, students are prepared for careers in a range of contexts in graphic design, interaction design, and exhibition design.
