MASTER OF SCIENCE IN THE FIELD OF INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS

Located in the heart of Washington, DC, where business and policy intersect, the GW School of Business (GWSB) affords students unmatched access to unique learning experiences and internship opportunities. The city is home to approximately 180 resident embassies and organizations of international consequence. GWSB has established relationships with institutions such as the World Bank, International Monetary Fund, Organization of American States, Inter-American Development Bank, and Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, among others.

Tapping into this network of global organizations, the GWSB Department of International Business has built a widely respected reputation throughout academia, and, more importantly, throughout the international business community. It is this solid reputation and academic integrity, along with a transformative study abroad component, that provides the foundation for GWSB’s master of science in international business degree. Students in the program complete two consulting courses—one working overseas with a client and the other for an international organization in Washington, DC. They also participate in a professional seminar that includes resume, interview, and technical skills workshops, as well as advice sessions from employers and alumni.

GWSB’s MS in international business program instills in students the knowledge and expertise they need to keep pace with the constantly changing global business environment, and allows them to do so in an environment that is multicultural to its core. A broad selection of electives gives students the flexibility to tailor the degree to emphasize their specific career interests.
