DUAL MAED&HD IN THE FIELD OF CURRICULUM AND INSTRUCTION, INTERDISCIPLINARY STUDIES CONCENTRATION AND GRADUATE CERTIFICATE IN INCORPORATING INTERNATIONAL PERSPECTIVES IN EDUCATION

The School of Education and Human Development offers a dual master of arts in education and human development in the field of curriculum and instruction with an interdisciplinary studies concentration (https://bulletin.gwu.edu/education-human-development/curriculum-pedagogy/education-human-development-curriculum-instruction-interdisciplinary-studies/) and graduate certificate in incorporating international perspectives in education (https://bulletin.gwu.edu/education-human-development/educational-leadership/certificate-incorporating-international-perspectives/) program. The 12 credits earned in the certificate program can be applied toward the master's. All requirements for both programs must be fulfilled.

The dual program prepares teachers and other educational personnel for increased responsibilities in the planning, implementation, research, and evaluation of curriculum and instruction. The program of study includes curriculum development, research and evaluation of instructional practice, teacher education, work with special populations, and school policy and leadership. The addition of the graduate certificate is designed to introduce global perspectives into curriculum, pedagogy, and school policy and practice.

Visit the Graduate School of Education and Human Development website (https://gsehd.gwu.edu/academics) for additional information.