The mission of the University Honors Program (https://honorsprogram.gwu.edu/) is to bring together outstanding students with a wide range of academic interests and challenge them through rigorous engagement in and contributions to a diverse community of scholars. The program’s distinctive curriculum promotes a broad liberal education that encourages students both to explore the most foundational questions of humanity and to apply their understanding to complex problems of the world today. Students enhance their coursework with research and other experiential opportunities and work with faculty and staff to achieve intellectual and personal development throughout their undergraduate years.

Incoming students must apply to the Honors Program when they apply to the University. Current students who wish to apply to the Honors Program must be in the second semester of their first year (rising sophomores).

Benefits of the University Honors Program include the following:

- A series of unique courses, addressing questions and issues through cross-cultural and cross-disciplinary perspectives, and drawing from the humanities, natural sciences, and social sciences. In their senior year, students complete a thesis and participate in an Honors capstone experience.
- Seminar-style classes with 15 to 20 students that provide an opportunity to probe a variety of evolving issues and eternal questions. These courses allow for the development of a collaborative academic environment between peers as well as strong relationships between students and faculty.
- A small program size of approximately 500 students. All first-year UHP students live in an Honors living and learning community on GW’s Mount Vernon campus. Upper-level Honors students have the option of living in an Honors residential community on the Foggy Bottom campus.
- Co-curricular programming that includes on- and off-campus activities with faculty, staff, and student peer-advisors. Examples include visits to local museums and theaters, film screenings, hikes, discussions in the program’s club room, student-faculty dinners, and guest speakers.
- Supplemental to other GW advising, Honors advisors who assist students with academic planning and can also provide personal and career guidance.
- Advanced registration during the second, third, and fourth semesters at GW.
- Courses that may count toward University General Education and/or Columbian College General Education (GPAC) curriculum requirements.
- For students who successfully complete the program’s curricular requirements, an indication of that achievement on their transcript.
