Students pursuing this concentration must take ECON 6283 and ECON 6284 as part of the core field requirement for the master's degree program. Students pursuing the international economic affairs concentration are permitted to double-count ECON 6284 toward the 12 credits of concentration coursework, thereby allowing them to complete the concentration with 9 additional credits of approved economics-related coursework beyond ECON 6283 and ECON 6284. Students concentrating in international economic affairs must take 9 elective credits to meet the overall 40 credit requirement.

Students must demonstrate proficiency in introductory statistics. Means of demonstrating proficiency include, but are not limited to, prior satisfactory completion of undergraduate statistics coursework, or STAT 1051, 1053, STAT 1111, or IAFF 6501 at GW. Students should consult the program director as soon as possible following matriculation into the program regarding additional ways in which this requirement may be fulfilled.
