

MASTER OF PUBLIC POLICY

GW's master of public policy (MPP) program, offered through its Trachtenberg School of Public Policy and Public Administration, prepares students to dig deep into the data and the details even as they explore the theories and the why behind the public policy that shapes government.

The curriculum balances coverage of public policy theory and practice with contemporary policy issues. Students complete a common core and select elective coursework in a field of study tailored to their unique interests and career objectives. Potential fields include budget and public finance; education policy; environmental policy; health policy; national security policy; philosophy and social policy; program and policy evaluation; public-private policy and management; science and technology policy; social policy; urban policy; and international development management. Students can also design their own field of concentration.

Classes for the MPP are held on the University's main Foggy Bottom campus. Many classes are in the evenings, enabling full-time and part-time students to pursue their degree while working. Full-time students typically complete the 40-credit program in two years, including one summer. Part-time students complete the program in three to four years.

Visit the program website (<https://tsppa.gwu.edu/master-public-policy/>) for additional information.

ADMISSIONS

Admission deadlines: Fall - February 1: Priority consideration for admission and funding; April 1: Guaranteed review for admission and consideration for funding, if available. (Applications for admission will continue to be accepted after April 1, when space remains available in the program.)

Spring - October 1 Late applications accepted on a case by case basis for students who do not require an F-1 or J-1 visa through November 1.

Standardized test scores: The GRE general or GMAT is not required however if you feel as though submitting scores for the GRE or GMAT will strengthen your application, you are welcome to submit them

The Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL), the academic International English Language Testing System (IELTS), or the PTE Academic is required of all applicants except those who hold a bachelor's, master's, or doctoral degree from a college or university in the United States or from an institution located in a country in which English is the official language, provided English was the language of instruction.
