

MASTER OF SCIENCE IN THE FIELD OF MANAGEMENT

The master of science in management degree is a perfect example of the School of Business's innovative approach to graduate education, combining core coursework with a flexible selection of graduate certificate courses that serve as electives. This format gives students a high degree of flexibility in designing a program tailored to their specific interests and needs, while giving them the management essentials that will serve them throughout their careers. The program is also especially well-suited for liberal arts or STEM students without an undergraduate degree in business.

The master of science in management program can be completed in one year of full-time study — part-time options are available as well — and students can choose to study online, on-campus, or in a hybrid format. The degree is also eligible to be combined with some GWSB's undergraduate degree programs in the 4+1 Program (<https://business.gwu.edu/four-plus-one/>), allowing them to earn a bachelor's and a master's in five years.

Visit the program website (<https://business.gwu.edu/ms-in-management/#MiM-admissions>) for additional information.
