

BACHELOR OF ARTS WITH A MAJOR IN INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

From discussion in the classroom with expert faculty to ambassador visits to campus and unique study abroad opportunities, international affairs majors at GW don't just study it, they experience it. They understand and engage with the world, building knowledge of economics, history, and political science, as well as the relevant areas of anthropology and geography and their respective methodologies. They also develop language skills, deepening their knowledge and understanding of the world. GW is surrounded by international institutions, such as the World Bank, State Department, U.S. Institute for Peace, Pentagon, and National Academies of Science. Students in the international affairs program have opportunities to attend events at these institutions, work as interns, and study with experts who have worked there themselves. GW international affairs graduates go on to serve as senior policymakers and diplomats, international business executives, and global nonprofit leaders.

Visit the program website (<https://elliott.gwu.edu/bachelor-arts-international-affairs/>) for course descriptions, concentration overviews (text and video), and information regarding opportunities for study abroad, internships, research, and more.

GENERAL REQUIREMENTS

General requirements

Elliott School bachelor's degrees engage students with global issues through multidisciplinary and interdisciplinary approaches. Students begin their studies in the first year with foundational courses in political science, economics, history, and anthropology or geography. They supplement these courses with others in the traditional liberal arts categories of writing, natural or physical science, mathematics or statistics, and the humanities/creative arts, plus two writing in the disciplines courses. Language study also is emphasized early to enable students to satisfy the third-year language proficiency requirement of the bachelor's degree in a timely manner.

Introduction to the major

Code	Title	Credits
------	-------	---------

Prerequisite core (19 credits)

Required

The following courses must be taken in the first year. With the exception of IAFF 1001 (fall), ECON 1011 (fall) and ECON 1012 (spring), courses can be taken in fall or spring. IAFF 1001 is not required for internal or external transfer students.

IAFF 1001	First-Year Experience
IAFF 1005	Introduction to International Affairs
ECON 1011	Principles of Economics I
ECON 1012	Principles of Economics II
HIST 1011	World History from 1500 to Present
PSC 1001	Introduction to Comparative Politics

One of the following (not required in the first year):

ANTH 1002	Sociocultural Anthropology
ANTH 1004	Language in Culture and Society
GEOG 1001	Introduction to Human Geography
GEOG 1003	Society and Environment

GEOG 1003 does not meet the prerequisite requirement for all upper-level geography courses.

Supporting courses in the liberal arts

Code	Title	Credits

Writing (minimum 10 credits)

Writing requirements are established by the University Writing Program. Students must complete UW 1020 before completing 6 credits in writing in the disciplines (WID) courses. These 6 credits must be taken in separate semesters. UW 1020 must be completed in the first year before enrolling in a WID course for credit toward this requirement. WID courses should be taken in the student's major, minor, or a related field. WID courses are designated in this Bulletin with a "W" appended to the course number (e.g., HIST 2340W).

Required

UW 1020	University Writing

At least 6 credits in two WID courses.

Mathematics or statistics (3 credits)

MATH courses numbered 1051 and above require a placement test. Credit for only one of the following MATH courses may be applied toward a degree: MATH 1221, MATH 1231, or MATH 1252. Credit for only one of the following STAT courses may be applied toward a degree: STAT 1051, STAT 1053, STAT 1111, or STAT 1127. STAT courses may not be double-counted between the Mathematics requirement and the Research Methods requirement (see “Major Requirements.”)

MAJOR REQUIREMENTS

The following requirements must be fulfilled:

The general requirements stated under Elliott School of International Affairs, Undergraduate Programs (<https://bulletin.gwu.edu/international-affairs/#regulationstext>).

A minimum of 120 credits, including completion of a functional or regional concentration.

Advanced Fundamentals

Advanced fundamentals build on the introduction to the major (p. 1) and continue the student's education in the basic skills of international affairs. Fundamentals focus on central disciplines, such as economics, history, and political science, and relevant disciplines, such as anthropology and geography. In addition, students gain a broader understanding of at least two regions of the world outside of the United States.

A minimum grade of C- must be earned in all international affairs major courses. This includes advanced fundamentals, regional foundations, concentrations, and the language requirement (the last course used to prove third-year proficiency.)

With the exception of WID courses, courses may not be double-counted between any international affairs requirements.

The BA in international affairs and BS in international affairs programs cannot be combined as double majors or double degrees.

Advanced fundamental courses are divided into the following areas. Course options for each are listed below.

- Research methods (3 credits)
- International economics (3 or 6 credits)
- Historical analysis: U.S. foreign policy (3 credits)
- International and comparative politics (3 credits)
- Anthropology or geography (3 credits)

Note: STAT courses may not be counted toward both the research methods requirement and the math requirement.

Concentration

All students in the BA in international affairs program must complete either a functional or regional concentration, which are listed below.

To fulfill the concentration requirement, students complete five courses (15 credits) related to their chosen functional or regional theme. The courses chosen to fulfill the concentration must be taken in at least two different academic departments. Students must declare a concentration no later than the end of the second semester of their sophomore year by completing the Concentration Declaration Form (<https://form.jotform.us/ESIA/concentration-declaration/>). With the exception of WID courses, courses may not be double-counted between any international affairs requirements. A minimum grade of C- must be earned in all concentration courses.

To explore concentration options, see course lists below and additional information on the Elliott School website. (<https://elliott.gwu.edu/bachelor-arts-international-affairs-curriculum/>)

Language requirement

Students must demonstrate third-year proficiency in a modern language by examination or coursework. If taking coursework, students can satisfy the language requirement by taking a course that is equivalent to third-year proficiency, or by taking a course beyond the third year which has a listed prerequisite of the second semester of the third year. Please note that the language placement exam determines the level at which students begin their language study. Additional information regarding the Elliott School language examinations is available from the academic advisor. This requirement is satisfied automatically for students who were required to take the TOEFL or IELTS examination as part of GW's admissions process.

CONCENTRATIONS

Concentrations

All students in the BA in international affairs program must complete either a functional or regional concentration, which are listed below. Students in the BS in international affairs program may complete one of these concentrations or they may take 15 credits in courses that count toward a second major in a STEM-related discipline.

To fulfill the concentration requirement, students complete five courses (15 credits) relating to their chosen functional or regional theme. These courses must be taken in at least two different academic departments. Students must declare a concentration no later than the end of the second semester of their sophomore year by completing the Concentration Declaration Form (<https://form.jotform.us/ESIA/concentration-declaration/>). With the exception of WID courses, courses may not be double-counted between any international affairs requirements. A minimum grade of C- must be earned in all concentration courses.
